Plain language

"a godly & grown up Woman in Worcester refused to give him a dollar because he had stolen himself. & at her death endowed a Church who had educated her in that Doct. "Why such a woman ought to be taken up by the nape of her moral neck, and to endure an agitation such as only plain, unmistakeable Language can produce."

"In a man who is seathed and inflamed to an fine thro' the effects of sin, the mildest breath of the zephyr of a moral rebuke seems terrible." "If I am never to use language which seems harsh to any man, I must descend to a very lowest level in the scale of humanity, & take care never to employ humour — else he will disappear
